

I urge you reconsider NAB's proposal to eliminate local traffic and weather on satellite providers such as XM. As radio consolidation has limited the content that is provided in traditional, over the air broadcasters, providers such as XM provide a valuable service. A very broad spectrum of content that is not provided even in a large market such as Dallas. As users seeking such content migrate to these services, it is important to still be able to receive news, traffic, and weather that affects our daily lives.
